Special Message from SBA President Banks Woodruff

As President of the first Student Bar Association to spend all three years of law school in downtown Raleigh, it is a distinct honor to share with you this very special message. I am sure you all have received many letters with statistics evidencing the tangible benefits of moving into the heart of our state’s capital, but the reason I write is more personal. I wish to assure you the revered culture of our school has weathered the storm presented through the type of adversity that would rattle lesser institutions to their very core. Such perseverance is not just by happenstance, however, and is purely the result of three fundamental factors: the incomparable leadership of our administration, the mentoring of our professors, and the heartfelt support from you, our soon to be brothers and sisters of the Campbell Law family.

The saying goes that, “Good things happen to good people,” with the culture at Campbell Law instilling that so long as one focuses on being the latter, the former will come in due time. This still is the culture of Campbell Law, which is why I proclaim with immeasurable pride that yes, it still means something special to be a Campbell lawyer. On behalf of the entire Class of 2012, thank you for allowing us to be a part of this culture. It has truly been a life-changing experience.

Sincerely yours,

Faulkner Named Interim Dean of Campbell Law

B. Keith Faulkner has been named Campbell Law Interim Dean. Faulkner replaces Melissa Essary, who has served as dean since 2006. Essary will join the faculty of the law school upon leaving the dean’s office. Faulkner will begin serving in his new role as of July 1.

“The leadership of Campbell University is grateful to Dean Melissa Essary. She was an extraordinary leader at the law school for six years,” said Campbell University Provost Dwaine Greene. “Vice Dean Faulkner is a skilled administrator who will build on the record of recent years. We have every confidence that the months ahead will bring continued strong leadership, coupled with ever-increasing student and faculty successes.”

Faulkner, who currently serves as Campbell Law Vice Dean for Administration and External Relations, has also held the positions of executive associate dean for academic affairs and administration and associate dean for external relations at the law school since his arrival in 2004.

A graduate of Campbell Law, Faulkner’s professional background includes private law practice as a litigation associate in one of North Carolina’s largest law firms, partnership in a private practice, eight years of service in the United States Navy as a submariner, nuclear power plant operator, and instructor in the Nuclear Power Training Pipeline.

Faulkner is very active in the profession, serving on many boards and on many bar-related committees that include the American Bar Association Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar Annual Questionnaire Committee, North Carolina Bar Association’s Professionalism Committee, the Wake County Bar Association’s Professionalism and Public Service Committees, North Carolina Prisoner Legal Services Board, where he serves as Treasurer, and many others.

Faulkner teaches courses at the law school on topics including Law Practice Management, Start Your Own Law Firm, Pre-trial Litigation, and also serves as a visiting professor at Campbell University’s Lundy-Fetterman School of Business where he teaches classes on business ethics and regulation of business.

He was instrumental in assisting Dean Essary with the transition of the law school from Buies Creek to its new location in Raleigh in 2009.

Ludlum Selected for North Carolina Bar Association Hall of Fame

Campbell Law alum J. Garrett Ludlum has been selected for enshrinement into the North Carolina Bar Association (NCBA) General Practice Hall of Fame. Ludlum marks the first Campbell Law alum to receive the honor.

A member of the Campbell Law inaugural class of 1979, Ludlum will stand as one of six lawyers inducted on June 21 at the 114th NCBA annual meeting in Wilmington, N.C.

Ludlum currently practices at Ludlum Law Firm in Warsaw, N.C., focusing on DWI offenses, traffic violations, accidents, criminal defense, real estate, family law, personal injury, and estate planning. Admitted to the North Carolina Bar in 1981, Ludlum is a member of the American Bar Association, the North Carolina Bar Association, the North Carolina State Bar, and the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers. He has served as president, vice president, secretary and treasurer of the Duplin County Fourth Judicial District, and has served on the board of directors with the Association of North Carolina Municipal Attorneys.

At Campbell Law, Ludlum was a member of Delta Theta Phi. He also obtained a bachelor’s degree from Campbell University.

Did You Know?
Campbell Law School and NC State partner to offer two outstanding degree programs. They include the JD/MBA with the Jenkins Graduate School at the Poole College of Management, and the JD/MPA with the School of Public and International Affairs.

Both programs allow students to receive dual degrees in four years, rather than the five years it would take to obtain both separately.

Complete information on both degree programs is available online at law.campbell.edu.

Professor Anderson Honored with Iredell Award

Campbell Law School Phi Alpha Delta Fraternity honored and presented longtime professor Thomas P. Anderson with the 2012 Justice James Iredell Award at a gala ceremony on March 28 at the Cardinal Club.

Since 1980 the Iredell Award has been annually presented to an individual who has made significant contributions to both the legal profession and Campbell Law School. Inspired by the life and writings of Justice Iredell, the award honors the recipient’s accomplishments, effort, and tenacity.

"If it wasn’t for the students, we would not be here," said Anderson. "Campbell Law School has created a ripple effect in the practice of law in North Carolina, and I appreciate you for honoring me for my part in helping to create that ripple effect in this state."

Professor Anderson graduated from the University of Alabama and earned his juris doctor cum laude at Cumberland School of Law at Samford University. He has taught trial advocacy and civil procedure to scores of practicing attorneys in North Carolina.

Prior to Campbell Law, Professor Anderson practiced law in Birmingham, Ala., arguing cases before both the state civil court of appeals and the state supreme court. Following practice, he was a Freedman Fellow at Temple Law School where he earned an LL.M. in legal education. He has taught in the Emory Law School Kessler-Eidson Trial Techniques program, as well as in continuing legal education courses in both Pennsylvania and North Carolina.

At Campbell Law, Professor Anderson coached numerous trial teams to regional championships and top-10 placements at national competitions. He received the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers prestigious Charles Becton Award for Outstanding Teaching of Trial Advocacy, and twice received the Campbell Law Outstanding Professor Teaching Award by a vote of the students. He was also the first recipient of the Campbell Law Dean’s Award for teaching. Upon his retirement as a full-time faculty member, he was named Campbell Law Professor of Law Emeritus by the Campbell University Board of Trustees.

Professor Anderson was also a founding member of the North Carolina Legal Education Assistance Foundation (NC LEAF), which serves as the nation’s first statewide loan repayment assistance program for attorneys working in public service careers. He served on the North Carolina LEAF’s Board of Directors from its founding in 1989 until his retirement prior to the 2011-12 school year.

Campbell Law, Professor Lee Host Lecture Series on Eugenics

Campbell Law School hosted a lecture series on eugenics throughout February and March. "Eugenics in America – History and Legacy" featured several prominent legal scholars and historians, offering a thorough and frank exploration into the history of eugenics in the United States.

Eugenics remains a hot-button issue in North Carolina.

Campbell Law School Professor Kevin P. Lee, a legal scholar with advanced degrees in Christian ethics, religious studies, philosophy, and religion, created and organized the entire series.

The series began on Feb. 15 with a screening of "The Lynchburg Story," and was followed on Feb. 22 by Dr. Phillip Thompson, Emory University Executive Director of the Aquinas Center of Theology. University of Maryland College of Education Professor Steven Selden visited as a part of the series on March 21, before University of Wisconsin Law School Burrus-Bascum Professor of Law Victoria F. Nourse gave the final address in the series on March 30.

"These lectures explore the brutal facts about the eugenics movement in America," said Professor Lee. "They remind us of the dangers to humanity posed by the advances in technology and scientific knowledge.

Law Review’s Intellectual Property Symposium a Success

More than 60 litigators and students attended an intellectual property symposium hosted by the Campbell Law Review on March 16. The symposium, "The New Global Convergence: Intellectual Property, Increasing Prosperity, and Economic Networks in the Twenty-First Century," featured 13 leading scholars and practitioners from around the country, and was designed to address and solve issues related to intellectual property that arise in a globalized society.

The symposium also served as a continuing legal education (CLE) event for attending participants.

"Our economy continues to become predicated on technology and innovation," said Campbell Law Review Editor-in-Chief Michael Crook. "It is our hope that this symposium will help members of the legal community successfully identify and resolve intellectual property issues that arise from globalization."

In addition to Crook and Campbell Law Professor Lucas Osborn, Campbell Law Dean Melissa Essary offered opening remarks. United States Patent & Trademark Office Chief Economist Dr. Stuart Graham delivered the keynote address over lunch.

Bagley Named Chair of Campbell Law Board of Visitors

Terence M. Bagley has been selected to serve as Campbell Law Board of Visitors Chair.

A 1982 graduate of Campbell Law, Bagley has served on the board since its inception in 2010. He is currently the deputy managing partner/head of litigation for McGuireWoods. His practice focuses on products liability, commercial litigation, and toxic tort. He is also the chairman of the firm’s consumer products safety team.

McGuireWoods is a 900-lawyer firm with 20 offices in the U.S. and abroad.

“I am very excited to serve as Chair of the Board of Visitors,” said Bagley. “This is an exciting time at Campbell Law School, and I look forward to working with our prestigious Board in fulfilling our law school’s vision, while maintaining our reputation as a special and unique place which produces the highest quality lawyer.”

Bagley has tried cases in state and federal courts across the country, and has argued cases in state and federal appellate courts. He has extensive experience in defending clients in automotive, power product, and toxic tort.

Brown Named Director of Development

Trudi Brown has been named Campbell Law Director of Development. Brown most recently served at NC State’s Poole College of Management as the director of development and external relations.

At NC State, Brown worked with alumni, corporations, and friends to secure financial support and identify opportunities to develop partnerships in support of the college’s students, faculty, and staff.

Prior to her tenure at NC State, Brown was the manager of annual programs and foundation operations at the WakeMed Foundation. At WakeMed, she ran all components of annual giving for the foundation and directed all operations, including reporting, donor relations, and board communications.

Campbell Law Hosts Screening of Documentary on Restorative Justice

Campbell Law School hosted a private screening of “The Final Gift,” on March 29. Directed by Therese Bartholomew, the documentary focuses on the restorative journey set in motion by the murder of her brother Steve Leone.

“The Final Gift” follows Bartholomew as she copes with the murder and deals with the grief and pain associated with it. While completing her memoir, “Coffee Shop God,” she began questioning the life of her brother’s killer. “The Final Gift” chronicles her attempt to answer questions and make sense of the tragedy that will forever link her and her brother’s killer.

Campbell Law Observer Moves Online

Campbell Law Observer has transitioned into a completely digital and wholly online publication, as announced by 2011-12 editor-in-chief John Hardin. Once delivered to each attorney in North Carolina, Campbell Law Observer has received a dramatic facelift.

The publication is available at http://www.campbelllawobserver.com. Campbell Law Observer is a student-run publication that places an emphasis on collaborating with legal professionals to author articles that chronicle trending legal policies.

Local Media Turns to Campbell Law for Experts on Major Case

Campbell Law Professors Bryan Boyd and Woody Woodruff recently served as legal experts for WRAL throughout and after the Jason Young murder retrial.

Professor Woodruff discussed jury selection and misconduct with reporter Amanda Lamb in January, while Professor Boyd participated in numerous reports, as well as a live special, on the guilty verdict and potential jurors misconduct. Boyd also served as an expert following the trial for 680 AM WPTF and The News & Observer. Woodruff also discussed the trial on 680 AM WPTF.

Several Campbell Law faculty members have been featured recently in the media, aiding in the growth of the law school’s media presence, including professors Amos Jones and Greg Wallace.

Graduation Set for May 11

Campbell Law School will hold its 2012 Graduation ceremony on Friday, May 11, at Meymandi Concert Hall at the Progress Energy Center for the Performing Arts in Raleigh. General William Suter, Clerk of the United States Supreme Court and member of the Campbell Law School Board of Visitors, will serve as the commencement speaker.
